TAKE A TRIP TO THE EXOTIC LAND OF MONGOLIA VIA THE AUTHENTIC FOOD OFFERINGS SERVED AT THE MONGOLIAN BAR-B-Q RESTAURANT.

The Mongolian cooking is simple as the Mongolian tent is not equipped for fancy cookery. The staple diet consists of mutton, and occasionally beef, cut in thin slices and roasted on a gridiron. This simple but unique way of cooking was introduced into the Chinese culture during the Genghis Khan invasion of China in 1211 A.D. Thus, in China, this delectable cuisine is known as "Genghis Khan Bar-B-Q" or more commonly known as "Mongolian Bar-B-Q". The addition of vegetables and other ingredients is strictly a Chinese innovation, as vegetables are very scarce in Mongolia.

There is an elaborate buffet-style table laden with many food choices from thinly sliced turkey, pork, beef and lamb, plus freshly cut vegetables, such as onions, cabbage, lettuce, green peppers, celery and bean sprouts, to name a few.

Dining patrons can choose one or all of these delicious selections which are placed in huge bowls and topped with a mild, medium or hot sauce of your choice.

These ingredients are then handed to a specially trained chef, who hurriedly prepares your food items on top of a special, metal-topped Mongolian stove, utilizing no greases or oils in the cooking process.
